[Mr. Curtis was femerly on the beach of the U. S. loyalty in these words: Supreme Court, and was the author of the Minority Report on the Dred Scott case.—aps. carscant.)

It is a time of strange excitements and strange acts. No man who does not my with which to stigmatize men who have in their favor all the ordinary presumptions of purity, and whose argumonths, with a violence unexampled even among a people whose political discussions are never marked by too much temperance, has culminated from time to time in outrages upon the rights of persons and property, and may do so again. It is no time when one would choose to utter opinions without being impelled by a strong sense of duty.

But if we are not prepared to suffer for our convictions, they must be very feeble convictions. If we do not love our country and its institutions well enough to encounter all the hazards that may attend an honest effort to save them, our love must be cold indeed. Such, I am sure, is not your case, or my own. (Applause.) Meaning to utter here nothing but words of truth and soberness—the truth as I
